Noninstructional Operations

Goals

In order for students to obtain the maximum benefits from their educational program, support services must be provided by the district. These services are essential to the success of the district, as are the staff that provides them.

Because resources are always scarce, it is essential that all district operations, including noninstructional support services, be carefully managed in order to obtain maximum efficiency and economy. To that end, the goal of the district is to seek maximize all of the resources that support students' learning programs.
